About Kerala

KERALA

Kerala, believed to have been first settled in the 10th Century BC by Pro-Dravidian tribes, this coastal state has had long trading and cultural ties with the Phoenicians, Jews, Greeks, Romans, Chinese, Arabs and various European countries for centuries.

Jews first settled in Kerala in around 4th Century and Muslim merchants in the 7th Century. After Vasco Da Gama's arrival in 1498, the Portuguese sought to control the lucrative pepper trade. Kerala was soon taken over by the Dutch, who in turn were expelled by the British.

The village of Kovalam, whose name means a grove of coconut trees, is an idyllic relaxing place in the south of Kerala.
